4. Read the following conversation between a university student and a server in the campus cafeteria.

Server: Hi! Did you have a chance to read the lunch specials?

Student: Yes, but I'm not that hungry.   I think I'll just have a sandwich. How's the tuna fish sandwich in this cafeteria?

Server: It's OK.   I prefer the steak sandwich, though.   I like things really fresh, and our steak is very tender and popular.

Student: Thank you, but I'll still have the tuna.   It's less fattening and I'm trying to watch my weight.   On whole wheat toast, please.

Server: Tuna on whole wheat.   Do you want chips or potato salad?

Student: Does the potato salad contain a lot of onion?

Server: There's not so much.

Student: That's good. I'll take it.   I don't like a lot of onion. Actually, potato salad is full of calories.   I'll just have the tuna fish—and no bread with that either.

Server: What would you like to drink?

Student: Coffee…no, wait! Do you know what I feel like? I know it's not healthy, but I would really like a milkshake!

Server: Sorry, and lucky for you and your diet.   The milkshake machine is out of order.

Student: Oh, really? How about a cola?

Server: Medium or large?

Student: Large and make it a diet cola, with plenty of ice, please.

Server: Yes, ma'am. We have small salads on special today.

Student: Good idea.   But no dressing, please.

Server: I know.   It's fattening.   It'll be ready in a second.

Student: Let me see⋯. Actually, on second thoughts, why don't you bring me the steak sandwich?

Server: (Laughs) You'll be happier with that.

Student: To tell the truth, I hate tuna fish.

Server: Is that all?

Student: Yes!

1. What is the student doing?
    A. Shopping for food.
    B. Planning a party.
    C. Ordering lunch.
    D. Going fishing.

2. What does the server imply about the tuna fish?
    A. It's not fresh.
    B. It's too expensive.
   C. It's not on the menu.
    D. It's fattening.
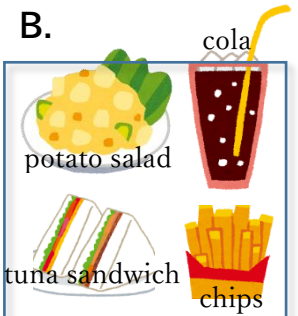

3. What can be inferred about the student?
    A. She is extremely angry.
    B. She never changes her mind.
   C. She is on a diet.

Sales of Computers

This graph shows sales of computers in three Asian countries, Japan, Taiwan and Vietnam, from January 2000 to July 2001. These three countries show different sales trends.

Sales of computers in Japan have been steadily increasing. （ 1 ） From April 2000 to April 2001, there was a gradual rise and then sales rose rapidly again to 17 million from April to July of 2001. To sum up, sales of computers in Japan show a constant rise during this entire period.

Next, let's look at Taiwan. In January 2000, sales were just under 9 million. The figure rose dramatically from 9 million in January to 12 million in April. In April it reached a peak and then dropped rapidly. It continued to drop until January 2001. （ 2 ）

Now Vietnam. From January to April 2000, there was very little change, but then sales began to drop gradually and the trend continued until October. （ 3 ） In total, sales of computers in Vietnam dropped during 2000 but recovered by July 2001.

In conclusion, Taiwan has for the most part shown a constant drop in sales, while Japan has shown a steady rise. Sales in Vietnam dropped once, but began to rise again.

A. Sales rapidly increased from 10 million in January 2000 to 13 million in April 2000.

B. Sales then began to rise and the trend continued until January 2001.

C. It rose slightly until April, but dropped again and has continued to drop.

D. Then it began to decline and continued to drop slowly until January 2001.
